The present century is pre-eminently one of practical progress and improvement, yet in no branch of industry have greater gains been made than in that which aids in loading the table with food perfectly prepared, one of the first and most necessary steps toward health, that boon priceless alike to prince or poor man. The brush heap probably cooked the first food, and the huge fireplace, garnished with hooks, cranes and ovens, was a giant stride in progress. It took years of patient toil to bring up to its present grade of utility the cast iron cook stove. It is now concededby most thoughtful people to have had its day of usefulness, and in every point of superiority Wrought-Iron Rages are superceding them. Investigation, experience and practical tests have demonstrated these to be incontrovertible facts. Practical experience is potent and absolute, and by that severe test we have carefully tried every progressive step and change in the construction of our Ranges. We absolutely guarantee them to work to perfection, and they make friends everywhere, They are marvels of usefulness, and economic no less than sanitary reasons urge that they be used in every family. Trying Experience of the Crew of the Schooner John T. Taylor.

Five Days in a Terrific Gale Without Food or Water-One of the Crew Washed Overboard; the Others Rescued in an Almost Dying Condition-Capt. Mumford's Interesting Story.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 22.—The steamer Crentuegos, from the West Indies, brought to this city yesterday Capt. Thos. Mumford, first mate; O. Olson and Louis Abrahams, Benj. Washington and Edward Moran, seaman, belonging to the three-masted schooner, John J. Taylor, from which vessel the steamer rescued the men on the 18th inst. in lati-tude 30° 11' longitude 75° 46'. The schooner was water-logged and demasted and the men had not asted food nor water for fifty-two and a half days. One of their companions was gone, also having been washed overboard three days previously. All the men were completely exhausted, but were carefully treated and no evil effects resulted from their long exposure. Capt. Mumford gave the following account of the disaster:

days previously. All the men were completely exhausted, but were carefully treated and no evil effects resulted from their long exposure. Capt. Mumford gave the following account of the disaster:

"We left Fernandida, Fla., on the 11th inst., with a cargo of lumber for Lagayra. All went well until the 13th, when a terrific hurricane overtook us, causing a very heavy sea. The vessel labored violently, but we were unable to make steerage way. Huge waves dashed completely over us, and we were compelled to lash a man to the wheel, and the rest of the crew to the pumps, as we were leaking. The storm did not abate next day, but I think we could have weathered it, had it not been that we were run into at 2 o'clock on the morning of the 15th inst. We were then sailing under a close reefed foresail and the vessel that ran into us was a three-masted schooner, scudding under a close reefed foresail and the vessel that ran into us was a three-masted schooner, scudding under a close reefed foresail and the vessel that ran into us was a three-masted schooner, scudding under a close reefed foresail and the vessel that ran into us was a three-masted schooner, scudding under a close reefed foresail and the vessel that ran into us was a three-masted schooner, scudding our vessel. She filled in two hours and, as the sea was still high, she rolled heavily. In order to prevent her going over we cut away the masts. We were all becoming exhausted and could do nothing to ease our vessel. Her sails were even with as made and could do nothing to ease our vessel. Her sails were even with a water and thirst began to as sail us, as we had partaken of no nourishment since the storm caught us. As darkness set in and no sail was in sight, the men began to lose hope of being rescued—a hope strong with us all through the day. At 10 o'clock that night poor Phil Graham, one of the seamen, was torn away by a wave which seemed to carry us all down by its weight. We could do nothing for our unfortunate companion; in fact, he was as much liked by us

"IT IS ALL RIGHT."

The Throngs that Attended Jerry McCauley's Funeral Yesterday.

ground a few white flowers spelled out the story of Jerry McCauley's death with "It Is All Right." So also said the preacher at the Broadway Tabernacle esterday, and the great crowd that looked into the right." The funeral services were announced for 2:30 o'clock. Long before that hour every seat in the large church was filled, and a squad of six poicemen barred the doors. But still the crowds oured into the church on Sixth avenue, at the cor poured into the church on Sixth avenue, at the corner of Thirty-fourth street, and, by the time the pastor rose to speak, there was another congregation outside the church trying to get in. Every decrway was tried, the eager visitors pushing their way into private entrances, and filling every available space. A young lady, one of the choir, arrived just at the opening of the services to find the way completely blocked. In vain she pleaded that some one must give way; that she must get in, or the exercises could not go on. The crowd was too great to be forced outside, and with tears in her eyes she turned away. But the admirers of the ex-convict and missionary continued to pour into the street, and at 3 o'clock the police kept guard over the Sixth avenue car tracks, so that the cars might not be blocked. Many grew thred and left, but their places were soon filled by others standing idly, patiently waiting for a glimpse of the man they had learned to love. It was a hesprogueuous assemblage that lingered about the church. Here were old women, wrinkled and seamed, who had known "Jerry" before his conversion, and touching their elbows were young men who had learned to live since meeting the earnest missionary. Here and there through the crowd the painted face of the scarlet woman showed itself, and by her side pushed the young shop-girl, who had been saved from tempration by the man who lay in his coffin inside. The tall hats of a few homeless tramps who had known Jerry from childhood. For over two hours the crowd waited, and then a few stragglers from the church announced that services were over. There was a rush to take a last look at the face of the friend of all, and for two hours longer a continuous stream flowed down the center a side past the coffin and our flowed down the center a side past the coffin and our flowed down the center a side past the coffin and our er of Thirty-fourth street, and, by the time the rush to take a last look at the face of the friend of all, and for two hours longer a continuous stream flowed down the center aisle past the coffin and out of the side door. Inside the church the aisles held almost as many people as the pews, and when Dr. Taylor, pastor of the church, rose to speak, he looked into the faces of 1,500 worshipers. The pastor referred briefly to his long acquaintance with Mr. McCauley, and said that during all these years he had never known the dead missionary to do an unchristian act.

A SWARTHY SHYLOCK.

attening On the Needs of Department

Washnoron, September 22.—The failure and sub-sequent suicide of Squier, the private banker, throws some light on a rather dark and unpleasant ibject, that of the interest rates paid by the ave subject, that of the interest rates paid by the average government clerks. They are an improvident lot, as a rule, living from "hand to mouth." the result perhaps of the salary system, and, in consequence, they seldom have anything ahead for an emergency. It follows that, in case of sickness or other sudden demand for money, they have to borrow, and as the security which they have to affect the security. usually of a very trifling character, they find themselves required to pay rates in keeping with the chances of loss. The interest rates which they pay are exorbitant. Two and three per cent per month are small prices. Five per cent is not a very unusual rate, and your correspondent has within the past few days seen a note for a considerable sum, given by one of the unfortunates of this class, in which eight per cent per month for a period of three months was promised, and paid in advance for the first month. The result of this wretched system is that many men with hard hearts and a tight grip have gone into the habit of iending money on collateral securities. They take, they say, pretty large risks, and as a result must have large profits, making, in other words, the honest unfortunates pay for the gains of the dishonest ones. They will loan you money on almost anything that is of sufficient value to be ample security for the sums advanced—a horse, a diamond, a fine picture, your piano or other furniture, but the rates of interest are not only usurious but scandalous. Not only are a Commissioner of the District and a Judge Advocate of the army charged with it, but an ex-member of Congress openly drives this sort of business, aimost beneath the shadow of the Goddess of Liberty which adorns the dome of the Capitol. One of the most successful of the speculators in misfortune and want is a colored man who prances through he departments in eyeglasses, light pantaloons and foreign-trimmed whissers every day, collecting high rates from his victims, and in the evening rides about the city behind a fine pair of high-steppers, looking with scorn upon those of any color who are obliged to resort to the more pleeblan methods of travel or pleasure.

That he will be elected I both hope and believe, but the chief danger to his ambition springs from that sin of years ago. Is there no warning in that? No voice to young men? If I believed Cleveland to be a libertine! would drop him instantly. I do not believe it. I regard him as a grossly slandered man, for political purposes, and that abuse, instead of deterring the from supporting him, appeals very strongly to my generosity and chivalry. That he is a prudent man, honestly and earnestly desiring to minister every trust faithfully and loyally, I have no doubt. My message to every young man is, beware of his mistakes of years ago and imitate his virtues of to-day.

A Speculative Young New Yorker Disappears With $20,000 in Bonds. By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

Boston, September 22.—Some time ago, Emery D. The securities were deposited in safety vaults in this city and were carefully looked after by the two gentlemen above mentioned. About three weeks ago, both the above mentioned. About three weeks ago, both the trustees made an examination of the funds and securities and found everything all right. In addition to the trustees, access to the vaults was also had by Chas. E. Stevens, son of Mr. Stevens, one of the trustees. Some days ago that young man left this city, but no suspicion was attached by the trustees to his absence, and it was supposed he would return soon. But his return was delayed and finally the trustees, upon making another examination of the property in their charge belonging to the estate, discovered that there was some $20,000 missing from the vault. Suspicion at once pointed to the absent one and Mr. Fisher, while not directly charging him with the theft, nevertheless expressed a desire to see him in the nearest possible future. The police ascertain that $14,600 worth of the bonds had been left with a Milk street broker on which an installment had been paid. After numerous inquiries, they learned that young Stevens was the party that took the bonds, and when last heard fo, he was in Jersey City. He dabbled in stocks con siderably and met with severe losses, and in order to make good those losses, he appropriated the bonds. Young Stevens has always possessed the confidence of the trustees, and the latter have always had a very good opinion of his merits. The bonds taken by him were $10,000 of the City of Lowell water bonds, numbered from 63 to 73 inclusive, The bonds are negotiable.

Impending Contest Between the Two Great Telephone Companies.

The Priority of Prof. Bell's Invention Con tested by Drawbaugh, a Pennsylvania Carpenter-Romantic Story of the Latter'

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, September 22.—The legal telephone contest, which will begin this morning in the United States Circuit Court, before Judge Wallace, involves time must have been ripe for this valuable discovery, for the patent office is flooded with patents, applied for and received, in quick succession on the heels of Prof. Bell's. These have all been in the nature of devices to improve on and perfect, or another part of the process. Bell disposed of his interest long ago, while the company to which he transferred all rights under the patent, has spread itself all over the country, and is now paying a dividend equal to 6 per cent on $100,000,000. All has not been plain sailing, however, for the Bell Company has met with obstacles and part of the profits have gone to lawyers. Under the patent laws of this country it is only to the first and original inventor that patent will be declared null and void by the courts. This vital question has yet to be settled. In 1880, 4the People's Telegraph Company was inaugurated under the laws of New York, and Daniel Drawbaugh transferred his telephone inventions to the company. At once the Bell Company saked for an injunction against it and the issue was made as to whether Bell or Drawbaugh first invented the telephone. A special commissioner was appointed by the court at that time to take evidence in the neighborhood of Drawbaugh's home at Eberly's Mills, near Harrisburg. Pa. For three years this taking of evidence has progressed. Hundreds of witnesses have been examined. The court will have all this mass of testimony before it, and the arguments of counsel will probably consume three weeks. The story told by the witnesses form one of the most none to the pursuits of science than to the acquiring of meat and bread. Prior to 1807, he had invented an electrical clock, various forms of telegraph, and devoted a great deal of time and labor to the problem of transmitting sound by electricity. His earlier instruments were extremely crude. A multitude of witnesses among his neighbors bear testimony to having seen and heard of the principle of the telephone at Drawbaugh's shop at various firms between 1870 and 1873, and the argument in his favor is based on the claim that, in February, 1875, he had invented and placed in practical operation all action as to the political candidate for the Presidency." He asks whether for the Presidency." ## REMARKS FROM A LAWYER,

Did the Necessity for Blaine's Marriage

Bosros, September 22.—The Boston Herald publishes the following from John A. Bennett, a well-known lawyer of this city: "Again Mr. Blaine in-vites the confidence of 50,000,000 of people in one of the confidence of 50,000,000 of the people in one of the confidence of 50,000,000 of the confidence of t his explanations, and again with disastrous results to himself. In the letter to W. W. Paelps, which it pains him to write, he attempts to unwind the thread of truth, running through what he $50,000 bas had previously called the utterly ane abominably false statement of the Indianapolis Sentinel. By the letter it appears thate married his wife in Kentucky. June 30, 1850, supposing the marriage perfectly legal until the winter of 1851, when he learned that, by the laws of Kentucky, his marriage without a license was invalid. Then the knowledge so worked upon his apprehensions that in March, 1851, he had it re-celebrated, in time to remove all doubt of the legitimacy of the child which was born in June, 1851. This is the explanation. What are the facts? That, by the laws of Kentucky and the repeated decisions of its highest court (3 Marshall, 372; 1 Bush, 64), Mr. Blaine's marriage in 1880, if then made, was perfectly valid. A license was not, and never had been, an indispensable requisite in that State. Not till July, 1882, two years from that date, did an act of the Legislature become a law, making a marriage void without a license. Whence came these doubts? May not the legal counsel he fancies he sought in 1850 have first been sought in 1884, from a too careless examination of the Kentucky statutes? The cause assigned for all these misgivings, we see, could not have been the true one. It is possible that the early marriage may be as mythical as the assigned reason for the second one."

SMALL LIE NAILED.

Gen. Marmaduke Discusses the Story About His Rebellious Position.

Nomination for Court of Appeals-Some Expressions From the Country-Political

"Have you been able to d iscover the origin of that story that you said you were a rebel and always ex-pected to be a rebei?" asked a reporter this morn-'Oh, yes. I not only know where it came from.

but I have absolute proof that it is false. No one who knows me would believe for a minute that I could be guilty of such an utterance. I have no concealments of my life and conduct to make. I went into the Confederate service, as many another man did, with the conviction that I was right, and when the war closed I returned to my home, engaged in earning a living, accepted the situation and renewed my allegiance to the United States with a sincere, and, may I say, a patrictic purpose to repair the damagos of war and to contribute my mite to building up its institutions. I regard such a charge as utterly silly, and I say so much as I now do because silence might be misconstrued. This campaign has been fruitful of such base and baseloss charges against me and the Democratic party that it would require volumes to refute them. I rely upon the honesty and intelligence of the people of Missouri to weigh, consider, and repudiate them. Here is a clipping from the Gentry County Ledger, which shows how the lie is regarded in the town where it was concoted. I showed it to the chief editor of the G.-D., (Mr. McCullagh being absent) believing he would be man enough to correct the falsencod which his paper published and sanctioned. But up to the present no notice has been given it. This may be the way Republican papers are conducted, but it is not the way honorable men act toward each other in war, politics or in any of the relations of life. A campaign based on slanders will not win with a brave and good people. Here is the clipping, and the General produced a clipping, the main facts of which are here given:

THE FACTS.

ALBANY, Mo., September 18.—Gen. Marmaduke said, in nan did, with the conviction that I was right, and slipping, the main facts of which shall be said, in THE FACTS.

ALBANY, Mo., September 13.—Gen. Marmaduke said, in conversation Sunday, that he was a rebel, always expected to be, and those who did not like it need not voic for him.

W. C. BOYDSTON.

conversation Sunday, that he was a rebel, always expected to be, and those who did not like it need not vote for him.

"The above appeared in the St. Joseph Herald of its Tuesday's issue. To say it is not only false but malicious, every honest and truthful person. In Albany firmly believes. The author of the dispatch is the editor of the Memoranda, the Republican paper recently started in this city. Knowing the dispatch to be false, several gentlemen, including. Col. Morehouse, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, went to Mr. Boydston on Tuesday evening, and in a gentlemanly manner requested his authority for the statement. With reluctance he stated that Dr. M. M. Campbell was his authority, and that the latter gentleman had assured him that he would make an affidavit to the contents of the dispatch. In company with Mr. Boydsson the gentlemen repaired to Dr. Campbell's office, where that gentleman was politely requested to verify the statement. His reply was that Mr. J. H. Whitecotton, a well-known and reliable Democrat of this city, had said that Gen. Marmaduke had used such language. Mr. Whitecotton being present asserted that he had made no such statement, and further, that he not conversed with Gen. Marmaduke on Sunday on any subject. Those who are acquainted with Mr. Whitecotton being present asserted that the that made no such statement, and further, that he not conversed with Gen. Marmaduke on Sunday on any subject. Those who are acquainted with Mr. Whitecotton being present on the search of the state of the

to increase the Democratic majority. Wherever I go I am met by Federai soldiers who extend hearty greetings and give assurance, not only by word, but by acts, that the part a man took in the unhappy war of nearly a quarter a century ago has no influence on his political convictions to-day. Not only are ex-Union Democrats giving our ticket a cordial, hearty support, but I am assured that a large and eminently respectable class of positive Republicans will vote the Democratic ticket. They are unwilling to place the State in the hands of men who would destroy and defame Missouri for pairry political gain."

"What truth is there in the report that Southwest Missouri is especially hostile to you on account of your war record? Is this true?"

"Your question reminds me of an interesting fact. A large portion of the delegates to the late Democratic convention were Union men, and, perhaps no one man had any more to do with their selection than myself, It was a harmonious convention. After it had finished its work there was more satisfaction manifested by the delegates over the nominations than in any other convention lever attended. As to the Southwest I consider the charge without foundation. True, some of those counties were for Phelps, some for Fyan, and others for myself. I know the positive, sterling qualities of the Democracy of Southwest Missouri and I scorn to think that any one of the brave men who have battled so heroleally for twenty years against the proscriptive of Southwest missouri and a scorn to think case any one of the brave men who have battled so heroically for twenty years against the proscriptive Republicanism of that section would be recream at this hour. Take Congressman R. W. Fyan of Webster County for instance he was reported among those opposed to me, but he has recently denied the slander in writing, and declares that he would be ashamed of his manhood were he to falter in the support of the Democratic ticket from top to bottom. Put those down as falsehoods circulated by the enemy to encourage their hopeless cause. I tell you, sir, you may tell the world, that Missouri will take no backward step. The achievements of the Democratic party since it rectaimed Missouri in 1872 are too glorious to be destroyed by placing a mongrel party in charge of the State without character or purpose except to belie the State, bring infamy upon her people, and secure spoils. Practically, here and there a man who lost a horse, a shote, a chicken or something else along the line of march that the Confederate armies traveled in their various incursions through Missouri, holds me personally responsible. But there are so few of these that they will not be missed at the grand assize in November."

that they will not be missed at the grand assize in November."

To-night the Republicans of St. Louis will hold mass-meetings in all of their wards to select delegates to the Court of Appeals Convention.

"I am not in politics, now," said a gentleman this morning who used to be conspicuous in the ranks which are now characterized by the term "hood-lum," but I think you can safely say, notwithstanding the confidence of Judge R. E. Rombauer's friends, he will not be the Republican nominee for Court of Appeals.

"Why do you say so?"

"Because the gentlemen who control things have no affection for Judge Rombauer."

"And why not?"

"Because of that famous card or letter which he and a number of other Independent Republicans signed four years ago, in which they declared they would not support Grant if he was nominated. You will remember that Mr. Filley was one of the famous 306 who fought for Grant, and it is not probable that he will forget that letter. No, you can make up your mind that to-night's primaries will cook Judge Rombauer's goose,"

"Either George H. Shields or John P. Ellis."

Not long after the above interview the same reporter met a gentleman who is in daily communication with the Hoodlum Committee.

"It is true," said he," that we did intend to slaughter Judge Rombauer on account of that letter, but we have changed our minds, and will make no fight upon him."

"And what induced you to change your minds?"
"Well, in the first place, we have been loudly declaring ourselves in favor of harmony, consequently it wouldn't look very well for us to oppose a mansimply because he was a SilkStocking. That would be going back on our all-forharmony platform. After we had discussed the matter at some length, we concluded that it wouldn't do to make any fight on the old issues, hence there will be no fight against Rombauer at to-night's meetings."

will be no fight against Rombauer at to-night's meetings."

"And he will be the nominee?"

"In all probability, yes. He seems to have altogether the lead, and, besides that, he is sure of the support of the Anzeiger des Westens, which, being a German Democratic baper, counts for a good deal in the campaign. It is just possible that Arba N. Crane might get in, but not at all probable."

Richard Roche, proprietor of Roche's Turf Exchange, authorizes the Post-Disparch to state that he will wager any amount from $5 to $5,000 that Cleveland will carry the State of New York in the November election.

"When I went to New York four weeks ago," said Col. J. C. Normile, the returned tourist, this morning, "the indications were all one way, in favor of a Democratic defeat. Nearly every leading Irishman I met was for B'aine."

"But what was the occasion of this great craezd?"

"Oh, they all got full of the idea that Blaine's would be an argressive policy, and that he would put England on the defensive at the very start. But, as I was going on to say, the situation is all the changed now, and hew York is almost absolutely bead with a bat, inflicting a cut three inches long.

"Hy no means. It was the evidence which has been submitted as to Blaine's anti-Catholic course in 1873. You know there was a story that in 1870 when Blaine was a member of the Republican State Central Committee of Maine, a Congressional candidate named Madigan, was viciously attacked by the Blaine committee on the ground that he was a Catholic. I have seen a capy of the circular, and it was fairly rabid in it, appeal to the American citizens of Maine to p down the Irish Catholic element. Well, of course, when this thing was received, Blaine saw the importance of it, and when the Bishop of Augusta sent for him and asked him whether he was in any way responsible for that circular he gave the Bishop solemn assurance that he never had anything to do with it, and that, it was issued by other members of the State Committee without his knowledge. This was accepted as true at first, but afterwards the evidence was procured which proved beyond all question that Blaine was the author of the infamous circular. The printer who set up the document testified it was in the band-writing of Blaine's private residence, adding their own affidavits to that evidence. The effect was to alienate the votes of all Irish Catholics who saw these affidavits, and during the past ten days I did not meet a prominent Irishman in New York who was not opposed to Blaine."

POLITICAL NOTES.

Some of the Greenbackers of the Eighth District have called a meeting of Greenbackers in a rather obscure way, to be held to-night at Social Turner Hall, to nominate a candidate for that district. These who were not party to the notice declare that the meeting is for the purpose of either nominating Andy F. Brown or of indorsing Rogers, who will, beyond question, be the Republican nominee in that district.

Great Crowd Present This Afternoon-An Epidemic of Mashers-In Search of Cheap Tickets-Press Room Presentation This Evening-To-Night's Concerts.

"About our hardest work now-a-days," said one of DISPATCH reporter, "is running down mashers, of up every night. Those articles which the papers sublished about the suspender and lemonade and se cream girls have just made the mashers believe that all they have to do is to visit the Exposition building in order to make a rapid succession of conquests. Saturday night we were kept busy as we could be following up the dudes, and no less than nine of them were ejects from the tuilding for impertinent attentions to ladies in the building. One of them, who had been raised to an undue appreciation of his mashing powers by the impression a suspender girl led him to believe he had made upon hef, sailed in boldly to capture the heart of every girl in the place. His methods were too direct, however, to continue popular, and at last he came across an ice-cream girl who objected very decidedly to his chucking her under the chin and calling her "my sweet baby." The young lady said nothing at the time, but, when he wasn't looking, she stole up behind him and emptied a plate of ice cream down his back. He screamed for help, and, when a few of us policemen gathered at the spot we that all they have to do is to visit the Exposition she stole up behind him and emptied a plate of ice creamed down his back. He screamed for help, and, when a few of us policemen gathered at the spot we heard the stories of all the parties interested, several of the girls whom he had mistaken for sweet babies giving testimony against him, after which we quietly walked him out of the place. A short time after this occurrence word was brought me that one of the lemonade girls had fainted. When I reached the spot she had come to, but she was still quite hysterical. Finally she quieted down when she confidentially told me that a middle-aged dude had engaged her in conversation and had then, without any warning whatever, proposed marriage to her. It was the first time in her brief career of thirty-five summers that such an affront had been put upon her, and before she had time to find fitting words to express her indignation, she became unconscious. She was not able to describe the came unconscious. She was not able to describe fully, though she said that she had seen him riding a bicy cle on Olive street near Jefferson avenue, on several occasions, and had once beheld him practicing ball-tossing in a vacant field off Nineteenth attreet.

The remainder of the audience was largely comprised of the hooser element, this being the day of the Vandalla excursion. At 3 o'clock this afternoon there were fully 8,000 people inside the building, the largest afternoon crowd it has contained up to date.

No one who visits the Exposition fails to spend a profitable half-hour in an examination of Belding Bro. & Co's, magnificent display of their silk manufactures. This noted firm's swoven goods earn the commendation of all who view them. In their production only the very best, new stock, made with pure dye, is used, and as the majority of these woven goods are handmade the result is simply perfection. These goods are superior in finish and correspond with the well-known quality of their spool silks.

EXPOSITION NOTES.

The Brotherhood of Statiowary Steam Engineers made an official application to-day to the Exposition Directors to learn "their terms for 100 tickets to visit the Exposition some evening." As the regulation price of admission is twenty-five cents, it is hoped that the management will make a reduction in their case, and let these thrifty gentlemen have the 100 tickets for $24 75.

The suspender girls have not discovered the name of the fleudish journalist who wrote them up, but some one has told them that his initials consisted of a trio of 3s. "We'll three J him over the baleony if ever we get our hands on him," said the tail blonde. The public don't agree fully with the critics in regard to "Marguerite." Some of the ladies find the flesh tints unnaturally hard and unpleasantly pallid. A good many of them, too, fail to discover such a vast amount of dramatic agony in the face of the murilerous mother as the critics have found. The dead baby, however, is acknowledged to be very natural. As a matter of fact the picture is passed by in a very cursory way by nine out of every ten persons who visit the Art Department.

"No, sir," said Mr. Abson. "the waiters don't overcharge any more. They are all good, honest fellows, and wouldn't take fifty cents for a quarter's worth of beer under any consideration—not when I'm looking, anyhow."

Legg and Givens have prepared for them. There will be specen-making, with Judge Lindley making the speech of presentation, and, after the oratorical exercises are over, the company will be invited to Abson's to partake of a nice little lunch.

A new exhibit in the mechanical department which will probably attract considerable notice is a flying machine, the invention of Mr. Frank Barnett of Keokuk. The affair is only a model, but Mr. Barnett's demonstration is so clear and comprehensive that hardly any one would feel any delicacy about allowing his mother-in-law or other one of his wife's relations to attempt on a ferial flight with the completed machine. The invention is as yet only in the theory of the existence, but before the Exposition to lases Mr. Barrett-will have his ideas embodied in a forty-foot-long air ship in which he will make daily trips along a circuit of which the starting point in a forty-foot-long air ship in which he will make daily trips along a circuit of which the starting point glaces will be the Custom House dome, the Court yet House flag staff, Dr. McLean's tall tower and the Four Courts.

Sergeant Burke swore that Patterson had said that he could identify him, and the Court suggested the propriety of looking into a perjury proceeding in the premises. ORIGIN OF NIAGARA.

How the Great Cataract and Gorge Were Formed.

From the Buffalo Courier.

A reporter to The Courier who was at Niagara Falls yesterday was more than ever impressed with the grandeur of Niagara's chasm. He saw long black lines marking off the various formations of the mighty abutments, and could not help wondering at the enormous length of time the watering forces of nature had required to dig out that solid rock and make the dizzy gorge.

The desire to obtain accurate information on the subject directed his steps later to the office of Dr. Julius Pohlman, in the Lewis block. Dr. Pohlman is one of the most prominent geologists of these parts.

mile desired. So below accurate information on the subject directed his steps later to the office of Dr. Julius Pohlman, in the Lewis block. Dr. Pohlman is one of the most prominent geologists of these parts.

"With great pleasure I will tell you anything I know about Niagara," said he. "In tracing the origin of this river, about whose benise cling such recollections of mystery and traged, we must go away back into the pre-gaical times will be a supper property of the present will be a supper property of sixty feet. The northern barrier of the lake was of limestone formation. Being about flity feet lower than the southern one, the overflow of water was toward the Ontario valley. The outlet found its way into the present channel of the present falls and the whirlpool, and thence through the side of the whirlpool, and thence through the valley of Sk. David's in Canada and onward through the office river above the falls.

"From here the waters met no obstacle, and in their flow predetermined the river gorge between the falls and the whirlpool, and thence through the valley of Sk. David's in Canada and onward through the office river above the falls.

"From here the waters met no obstacle, and in their flow predetermined the river gorge between the falls and the whirlpool, through the side of the whirlpool, and thence through the side of the will be river from the whirlpool through the office of the present in the present five the ancient lake changed. Well, the er wintpool, where another hall was caused by quartzose sandstone of the Medina group. Thence there was a rapid current to Ontario basin. The volume of water then was exceedingly small as compared with the estimated twenty million cubic feet of the present. Now, at the time of the glacial period the movement of the ice sheet was in a northeasterly direction. The channel of the great river which I remarked about in the beginning was excavated deeply and the valley of the great lakes was formed. When the Arctic climate again changed into a temperate one, the ice sheet retreated northwest and in its melting spread over the land all the ground-up material as well as the rocks which had been caught up and carried under, and the valleys of the St. David's, Tonawanda and others were more or less completely filled up with drift. The channel of the old Tonawanda River from the whirlpool was also included in the filling process. After long ages the ice disappeared and the bed it had occupied became the scat of the chain of great lakes. At this time Lakes Erie and Ontario formed two large bodies of water and were at the sent level. That is, their surface were lakes. At this time Lakes Erie and Ontario formed two large bodies of water and were at the same level—that is, their surfaces were even with Lewiston heights. The waters in the lakes began to subside and a mud flat appeared between them, extending from Buffalo to Lewiston. An outlet from Lake Erie was formed through this flat, and we have the present Niagara River."

"I have always been taught that Niagara falls, were originally at Lewiston, and wore

"I have always been taught that Niagara falls were originally at Lewiston, and wore their way back," said the reporter.

"That is the popular theory, but it is erroneous. In that case we must suppose that Lake Ontario was lower primarily than Lake Erie. It was not. I have found traces of the beach which its surface touched up on the mountain side. Both lakes subsided together, and Niagara river wore out its present channel in flowing from one lake to another. Of course you understand it has required ages, thousands of years, to accomplish this work."

"Why didn't the river follow the old channel and empty through St. David's valley?"

"Because the valley was drift-filled, and there was a shallow valley from the whirlpool to Lewiston. The erosion was very rapid. It was the line of the least resistance. Hence the bend of the river at right angles at the whirlpool is accounted for. As the excavation of the lower gorge was progressing the falls of the replacial river came again into action. The two lower falls became rapids and the upper fall began to recede in horseshoe form. The retrocession brought it to the apex of Goat Island opposite Prospect Park, when the cataract divided and formed the American and Horseshoe falls. The northern margin of Goat Island was quickly undermined and destroyed by the combined action of the waters, and was compelled to recede with the Canadian fall."

"Have the falls retreated recently, and if so, how far?"

hadn't time to, after she got down as far as Fifth street. The two had the middle of the street, and were rather enjoying the promenade, when the calf suddenly concluded that city life was too rich for his blood. He suddenly halted in his tracks and braced his fore feet at a sharp angle. The woman kept on her way for a minute, and when the strain came she lengthened that calf's neck by six inches. It was no go, however. She braced and he braced. She pulled and he pulled. By and by he began to back and gain on her. Her feet slid along for a yard or two, when she sat down and got her foot against the the street car rail. It was now time for spectators to tender their sympathies and advice, and remarks began to come in. "Hold to him, old woman—you've got the bulge!"

and advice, and remarks began to come in.

"Hold to him, old woman—you've get the bulge!"

"Shut your eyes and you'll fetch him!"

"Fish on your line—pull him in!"

Along came a grocery wagon, and the hub of a wheel rubbed the calf. He jumped clear off the ground and took a half-circle around, the woman, pulling her over on her side. No one offered any assistance, and when the coming car forced her to take a new position she scrambled up and got a neck-hold on the calf. He at first broke down and began to bawl, but suddenly took heart and made a run for the sidewalk, dragging her along. The crowd advised her to pinch his ears, throw him down, call for the police. She was silent and, grim. She got a firm hold of his neck with both hands and pulled him back into the street in spite of his bucking. To the casual observer he was a gone ca.f., but as she stooped to the her shoe a boy stuck a pin into him and he sailed right over her and brought such a strain on the rope as to fling her down again. It was now a question as to whether she would pull his neck off or he would draw her across the street, but when the strain had continued for fifteen seconds the rope broke and the calf went off like a deer. A policeman who had arrived too late to be of assistance thought to offer some consolation, but the woman made a pass at his nose with one of her dirt-besmeared hands and snapped out:

"Shet up! If there'd been a decent man in Such a liceuse certainly was equired for the protection of the minister or nagistrate uniting the couple, but not to render the marriage valid. Any person authorized by law to perform the ceremony would have told him that. Had he enlisted the services of any such person, the marriage would have been lawfully binding on the parties in Kentucky, though the minister or magistrate would have violated the law by marrying them without a license. There are thousands of couples in Kentucky who were married at Aberdeen, in Ohio, without the license required by the law of Ohio, but whose marriage has been held binding in Kentucky courts for all purposes, including prosecutions for bigamy. So, accordhis own statements and implications, his first marriage was a very informal affair, indeed, a mere agreem before two witnesses, neither authorized by law to pronounce a couple man and wife. every election there are voters who cast their ballots for the late ANDREW JACKSON finds a par allel in vesterday's riot at Castlewellan in County Down, Ireland. The cause that stands behind the fight is the STUART family, and the principles that that unfortunate race represents. The memories, bitter and unwholesome as they are, which the Pretender's cause has bequeathed to Ireland, live after the last drop of the Pretender's blood has ceased to flow in the veins of any living man. In England and Scotland Jacobitism died on the field of Culloden in 1746, but in Ireland it survives yet, and the Irish race has brought this issue to America, and on many a 12th of July in Canada and the United States blood has been shed in the streets of our great cities to vindicate the "glorious, pious and immortal memory of WILLIAM of Orange.

And yet there is one reason behind the appar ently unreasonable and diseased sentimentality, which thus keeps alive an unfailing source of slot and disorder. The House of Orange and the Hanovarian Succession represent to the ter and unjust form. This very town of Castlewellan and the County of Down exhibit as well as any other part of Ireland, what this Ascendency meant in a country composed of Irish Catholics. Some four or five great Irish families had held this land since the beginning of the historical period. They had branched out and ramifled and intermarried until the county was filled with a happy people, joined to each other by a nexus of consan guinity, and attached to the ground by that fiber of patriotism which grows so strongly in the Irish breast. They were not a barbarous or incivil people, as the testimony of contemporary English history of the seventeenth century shows. After the Confederation of 1643 and the Settlement which was won by the sword, Down was especially loyal to the Stuart Kings of England. For that loyalty CROM WELL first, and WILLIAM afterwards, made the holders were torn from their homes and their places filled by Adventurers. No troth was kept with the mere Irish. The riot at Castlewellan was foolish; nothing chief recommendation. Like vermifuge, a child ing police barracks-but it was natural. It would be much more reasonable for Orange and Green to meet each other half way, to forget old differences and forgive old wrongs, and to go to work as one people to build up a new nation; but this reconciliation would be easier if the whole habit of thought, the education and his tory of Ireland, could be entirely blotted out and forgotten.

THE PROHIBITION VOTE.

The Prohibition party appears to be rent in twain by a division on the question whether its support of St. John or of Blaine will best promote the Prohibition policy.

The veteran leader of the party, NEAL DOW of Maine, whose authority has been undisputed until this contest began, takes the ground that it is only in and through the Republican party that the Prohibitionists have succeeded in He vouches for BLAINE as a cautious, but cerely believes that every vote for BLAINE is as much a vote for Prohibition as any vote that was ever cast for the Republican State ticket

On the other hand, Sr. JOHN represents and leads the Prohibitionists who are not satisfied with what the Republican party has done for the cause, and who are impatient of the delay in the surrender of that organization to Prohiof SARAH C. STANWOOD and S. L. bition control in some States. Having whipped it into a surrender in so many States, they law to join parties in wedlock. He says that ciple or conviction, but of campaign strategy merely, and that it will promptly espouse the cause of National Prohibition when taught by this election that it cannot elect a President without the solid Prohibition vote.

So far as Prohibitionists are concerned it simply a question of obtaining complete which they feel that they already have a very strong hold. Some of them, like the radical Abolitionists of old, are for standing aloof and using the balance of power lever to capture the organized opposition to the Democratic party. Others, like the more cunning auti-slaver politicians of the past think it best to hide the time and rely on their powerful co-operation to gradually mould the Republican party to

This latter view seems to prevail most when ever Prohibition is the strongest. NEAL DOW and the Maine Prohibitionists are pleased rather than discouraged by Mr. BLAINE's dodging th vote on the Prohibition amendment. Col JUTMORE, who was nominated as the straight out Prohibition candidate for Governor of Kansas, declined on the ground that fidelity to the cause of Prohibition required all Prohibitionists to support BLAINE and the Republican State ticket. In States where a Prohibition ticket endangers the success of the BLAINE should have known this, and his pleading such ticket, we find the Republican press ringing with statements like the following, which we take from an editorial in the Philadelphia Call Neal Dow is for Blaine. Francis Murphy is for J. Ellen Foster is for Blaine. The various distric eclared for Blaine on the Prohibition issue. The pitionists of his State, says they are for Blaine a against St. John. The Women's Christian Tempe ance Union of Kansas has adopted a resolution declaring that the success of Prohibition depend-upon the triumph of the Republican national ticket. The various temperance unions in the sam have passed similar resolutions.

On the whole the indications are that a large najority of the Prohibitionists will keep their old places in the Republican ranks, regarding the nomination of BLAINE as a great victory for their cause and a guarantee of the future scendency of the Maine idea in Republican party management. Mr. BLAINE's dodging on the Prohibition amendment at the recent election has disgusted more of the opponents than of the friends of that measure, and there latter will vote so as to deprive him of the electoral vote of any State which it is in their power to give him.

The Wheat Question. Sr. Louis, September 22, 1884.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch. I think you take the right view in your Saturday's local headed as above. With our millions of acres of workmen who are idle half their time striking for higher wages would be doing much better if they were tilling the soil. The assertion that wheat sells for less than the cost of its production is totally false, however low it may wheat. Of this he uses all be needs and the surplus ment equal to his expectation. But such an unfavorable result to the capitalist's investment in farming is in no wise discouraging to the real farmer, whose productions cost him only his own labor, and that of his own family. These latter are the desireable farmers. Therefore, let us raise wheat in such abundance, and sell it at such price that the European farmer will soon give up the unequal competition. Then, if our European brethren can manfacture some articles cheaper than we, let us buy such from them. This is fair.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch. Agriculture has some valuable information about the condition of crops abroad-valuable, but not very agreeable, to the crop raiser here, who has grain to sell. It shows that Europe has, on the whole, bette crops this year than in many years previously, and that already low prices are even lower there than they were last year. In England the crop has been harrested in exceptionally good condition, so much so that the Department report says that the season "has been marked with a red letter, and hailed a seemed to have established, that the British climate was gradually, but surely, turning colder and wet-Good Enghish wheat, it says, is now sellin vance in prices. In both Northern and Souther ter than last year. Australia is likely to have not 000,000 bushels to sell. In Russia the crop reports are announced as "generally favorable, but slightly under the average." In France the wheat crop is seme 5,000,000 hectoliters greater than last year, and seme 5,000,000 hectoliters greater than last year, and the prices, since it was assured, have fallen five cents per hushel. In India the crop is reported good, and the prospects are that the surplus for export for this year may reach 50,000,000 bushels. In Australia the yield of wheat is some thirteen million bushels more than last year, the increase in acreage being very large. In Canada, too, the universal prosperity of the breadstuff production is felt, the wheat crop being 10,000,000 bushels better than last year. Thus in nearly all the wheat-producing countries of the world, England, France, Germany, Austria, Russia, India, Australia. Canada and the United States, as well, the wheat crop is unusually large and of excellent quality, while the season large and of excellent quality, while the season starts in with prices phenomenally low and the supply from last year by no means exhausted.

In view of these facts and a series of similar ones that have been accumulating for a number of years. Prof. Dodge, the Statistician of the Agricultural Department, again rises to remark that the people of this country are going to find themselves in trouble if they continue in the habit acquired in the past years of attempting to depend on making it pay by producing grain for a foreign market. The fact is, he says, that with the competition of the very cheap labor of Russia and India where wheat may be raised at a cost of thirty-five cents a bushel, it is going to be difficult for our people to raise wheat, and, with the small proceeds, keep up their present habit of buying millions of dollars worth of stuff abroad that they might as well make at home or else go without. Our area in wheat, he says, is 38,500,000 acres, being 12,000,000 acres in excess of the wants of the country, the produce of which 12,000,000 acres must be sold abroad in competition with grain of Russia, South America, Australia and India. It is sent 1,500 miles by land and 3,500 miles by sea to compete with the balf civilized fellahs of Rgypt and the slavish ryots of India. It is, he adds, a competition utterly unnecessary, being caused by bad calculations in the distribution of crop areas; for, while we export one-fifth of the wheat production we import one-seventh of the barley consumption and $100,000,000 worth of sugar, which brings $150,000,000 in the local markets, in addition to the cost and profit of refining here. Labor, he says, should he more evenly nomenally low and the sup-kets, in addition to the cost and profit of refining hers. Labor, he says, should be more evenly distributed in the production of all the articles required by the people of this country, especially as agricultural nations are proverbially poor everywhere. Considerable attention is also given to the wheat capabilities of India, in which the effect of the proposed railway and canal extensions on the capacity of that great wheat field are taken into account. The conclusions arrived at are that while with these facilities added to its present ability to produce wheat at 35 cents per bushel, it will be a dangerous competitor, its possibilities as to area of wheat land and quantity that can be produced have generally been over-estimated.

BEAVER BUSH, N. Y., September 22. way, a hunter, was hiding near the head waters of Ten Mile River Friday last, waiting for wood ducks in the stream. A large blue heron alighted at the edge of the water, a short gun-shot away. Janeway fired at the bird and it fell to the ground, where it lay fluttering, apparently badly wounded. To lay fluttering, apparently badly wounded. To secure the bird alive, the hunter laid down his gun and ran toward it. It had struggled to its feet, and when he approached it turned and tried to run away, but was hurt so badly that is fell again to the ground. Janeway stooped over the heron to seize it, whereupon the bird sprang up and, darting out its long neck, struck Janeway a blow in the face with its beak, cutting his cheek and knocking him down. As he regained his feet, the immense bird, which stood nearly four feet high, flew at him again and struck him over the right eye with its beak, Janeway fell again, and the bird attacked him as he lay on the ground. The heron, although wounded, was so quick that it had given the hunter a third blow, this time full in the left eye before he could-make any defense. Maddened with pain, Janeway sprang to his feet and, rushing upon his singular antagonist, seized him about the neck with both hands. The bird's strength was so great that, strangled as it was by the hunter's desperate cituch, it required all of Janeway's strength to retain his hold, until it was forced to succumb and he choked it to death. The hunter was covered with blood and he was unable to see with his left eye. THE LAW'S DELAY.

Three Years' Work Ahead of th United States Supreme Court.

Washington now, omitting, perhaps, the political headquarters, is the Supreme Court rooms. The array of new cases coming in here, the display of documents, legal and otherwise, the activity which speaks of preparation for a long and busy session of the court, show that the days of the familiar "Oyes, Oyez! the Honorable, the Supreme Court of the United States is now in session," will soon be at and again.

"They are coming in on us in ow," said an attache of the court, as he shouldered aside a big bundle of written legal lore. "They are coming from every direction, and are keeping us is simply because of the large number of cases ahead of these now coming in. There are now as many cases on the docket as can be disposed of in three years' hard work, under ordinary and present circumstances. Yes, it will be fully three years before these cases can be taken up."

"How many are there, then, on the docket now?"
"Nearly a thousand. That is there were that many when the term ended last year. With those now coming in the number will run considerably above that."

"And how many are disposed of each year!"

"And how many are disposed of each year!"

"About three hundred, or just about as many as come in yearly."

"Then the court is not gaining any on its work?"

"No; it just about keeps even with it, but is, as I said, about three years behind. It will never catch up, with the present state of affairs. It the number of cases that may be appealed were cut down or the court increased and divided into sections, it might get through but not under the present circumsiances. There is a growing tendency to appeal everything to the Supreme Court that can be so appealed, and the time of the court is taken up with a it of small cases unworthy of its attention."

The MEMBRES OF THE COURT are arriving from their summer vacations, and preparing to resume their gowns on the second Monday of the coming month. Of course, everybody will be sorry for the poor fellows, on hearing that they have three times as much work before them as they can possibly perform. It will doubtless worry them very much. No one need be alarmed, however, by the supposition that it will induce them to begin their sessions of the court before daybreak in the morning. They will begin the sessions, as required by law, at 12 o'clock noon of each week-day, except Saturday, and sit until about a o'clock in the afternoon, or about twenty hours -per week. They will take their usual holiday week off, and the court will, of course, not hold sessions on any legal holidays, or other occasions when there is an excuss for omitting to do so. It will adjourn, as usual, about the 1st of May, making the term of the session about twenty-five weeks, or about five hundred hours on the beanch, It may also be added that they will probably not neglect to fraw their $10,000 for their year's services ($20 per hour for the time spant on the beach), or, to remark upon the very low price which the United States pays its public officials in general, and supreme Court judges in particular. It may be added that they will probably not omit to retire on reaching the proper age, and go on d

to those unaccustomed to this spectacle, to see these grizzled and grave members of the highest judicial body of the land in session. They sit, as everybody knows, in the old Senate chamber, whose many memories are of itself sufficient to make it a sacred place. It is a semi-circular room in the old central portion of the great Capitol building.
Across the room at the longest part, and facing the door, is a long, high desk, behind which the judges sit in comfortable chairs, the Chief Justice, Mr.
Waite, in the center, the others at his right goes without saying. It may not be generally known, however, that this presence is so dense and important that even the act of writing a line in the way of note—taking by the innocent (spectator is liable to be construed as "contempt," and to subject the intrividual servicularing to a fire. Roush and his son Edward were driving home their horse became frightened and ran away. The young may was thrown out at the first jump, and so escaped with slight injuries, but at the intersection of Olive and Evans streets the runaway struck a tree, and Mr. Roush, ar., was hurled against it. His head was crushed and his shoulder broken, while three of his ribs were driven into his lungs. He died during the night without regaining consciousness. safer at home, and we lost no time in starting. Had I been alone, I would probably have come through part of the stricken region, but as I had my family I concluded to take the northern route, and hence we saw nothing of the scourge. But between you and me I do not think that there was anough danger.

and me I do not think that there was enough danger to justify the great scare that occurred. I think that with ordinary precautions as to health a man could travel almost anywhere in safety. It seemed as though the disease was restricted to only such quarters as those in which the most unhealthful conditions prevailed. I regretted exceedingly when I heard it had gained a foothold in Kaples, because that is one of the most beautiful of cities, and we had become pretty well acquainted with it early in the season."

"It proved a terrible epidemic there, did it not?"

"By no means. The deaths numbered at times nearly three hundred in a day, but when you consider the size of the city that was not such a very great mortality. Naples has, I think, over six hundred thousand inhabitants, and she is, I think, to commercial queen of the Mediterranean. Her ashipping interests are tremendous, but besides that she is a stopping place for neariy all vessels carrying traffic in any direction. Her people are an enterprising, thrifty class, and her architecture is splendid. While there, by the way, I learned for the first time why it is that our export trade to the Old World countries is so combaratively limited."

"Because of a lack of demand for the goods?"

"By no means. They would like to have our goods, but the whole trouble is, to put it plainly, that American merchants are in too great a hurry to get their money. A wholesale merchant in Naples, however large and ready his capital, however extensive his business, is not accustomed to pay for his goods until from four to six months—usually six months—after their delivery. That is the European custom They are his business, is not accustomed to pay for his goods until from four to six months—usually six months—after their delivery. That is the European custom. They are in a hurry, as we do here. A heavy importer gave me a very practical illustration of this idea. American caviar, he said, is very much ilked by his customers, and ranks almost as high as the Prussian. An American dealer, however, sends his samples and asks him to state by return mail what he will give for so many packages of the goods, cash payment. That query settles the case at once, for the rules of business there are such that the Neapolitan has no disposition to bid for the goods in the first place or to pay cash in the next. He simply decilines to trade, and the American wonders why it is that the foreign market for his goods is so poor. If, on the other hand, in place of asking for cash bids, he had stated his price, allowing six months' time, the probability would be that he would receive orders right away. This seems like a small matter, but these people are so wedded to their commercial ways that they demand that any, firm which desires to do business in their market shall conform to their rules. The result is that, instead of selling to the merchants direct, American dealers must sell to London or Liverpool jobbing houses at lower rates than necessary, and these houses, knowing how to deal with the continental trade greap the main profits."

"By no means. As a rule American goods are too fine for the markets of Great Britain and Europe. The coth which the masses of the people over there want must be very cheap—cheaper than almost anything we manufacture. The Englishman, for instance, even though possessed of a comfortable income, wears business suits made of a rough and rather filmsy cloth called cheviot, which can be made for from §14 to $18. It is really very poor in quality. Here in America we manufacture for home trade, and am to export only the surplus of our manufactures, but the goods come in competition the goods that we make,"

"Boots and shoes, too?"
"Yes. In the first place, you can't get a good pair of boots or shoes made in all Europe. That is a strong statement, but I speak advisedly. England has some reputation over here for its Wallkenphas. "Yes. In the first place, you can't get a good pair of boots or shoes made in all Europe. That is a strong statement, but I speak advisedly. England has some reputation over here for its Waulkenphast shoe, but you can't get a well-made, well-fitting shoe in England. The people, I tell you, won't pay for them. The articles they make are poorly put together, very lacking in beauty, and liable to give way when but a few weeks in use. I have had a soie to drop right off a comparatively new shoe, and it seemed as though it were only pasted on. My experience in that particular had been such, that when we went away this time we took a large stock of shoes for our children from a St. Louis shoe house. As an experiment I had one pair of shoes made by a shoemaker who supplies royal patrons, and the result was disgusting, though the price was as high as for fine work here. The fact is, that where the general trade demands fine goods there will the good workman be, and in shoes and cloth America is far superior to the countries over the water. The mass of the people are so very poor there that it must be so. The poverty of the working classes of England has never been overdrawn, it seems to me. Why it is so abject that a worse grade would be hardly conceivable. Full, ruddy countenances, such as you see on workmen here, are unknown there. The faces are sharp and pinched, the figures lank, and the clothing hardly worthy of the name. It is a very common thing there to see men wearing old pants and coats patched up with pieces of gunny sacks.

and their skimpy income invested in beer will purchase more sustenance than in any other form of food, and hence all they have to spare goes for beer. It is really painful to an American to go through one of the cheap quarters of London."

"What do they do for their beer on Sunday?"

"Every beer and ale house in London is closed on Sunday, and yet there is lar more drunkenness to be seen there on Sunday than on any other day of the seven. It is only painful do an A morning and discussed with a group the challenge that Thomas H. Dunn has addressed

"Are there two ways of killing?" asked a Post-Dispatch reporter of the speaker, who is one of the most expert butchers in the city.

"Yes, most certainly, and that fact must be considered when a contest is arranged, as there is such a wide difference in the methods that the trial would result in nothing satisfactory. The two methods are distinguished as the 'market' and the 'packing.' In the former there is not much thought given to the time taken in killing, as the stores and shops are supplied by such killers, and it is necessary that

THE BEFF BE WELL DRESSED.

In the large packing houses, however, little or no attention is given to the appearance of the beef, as it is canned or packed away and the public gets no chance to see the way it has been handled. And it is not a very easy thing to deceive the public in such a matter either, as the difference can be easily marked. For instance, in killing for packing the work is done about twice as fast; and in taking off the hide or skinning the critier, they are often compelled to leave great chunks of meat on the hide to avoid cutting the skin. Then again the washing is seldom done properly, the blood is not removed right, and the backbone is frequently hacked all to pieces in the hurry of getting the piece finished. Such rough work is easily discovered when it is placed on the blocks for retail trade. Of course, this challenge is meant to apply only to market killing, as nobody would that regarding Biante and the Amingan letters. One of Mr. Rankin's efforts may be cited as an example of the rest.

"St. Louis is a very nice city.

Her river is a loiler.

But that yellow mud will give You the rams, malaria,colic or cholera."

Surely after ten years or so of rest, something better could be drummed up than that. Mary's lamb also was pressed into service again, and the unfortunate mutton was treated with a suggestive silence. Throughout the burlesque there are an unusual number of very pretty marches, solo, concerted and choral effects, and several of these were most enthusiastically applauded, the clock, song by Miss Carson being received with especial favor. Taken in all "Bluebeard" is a very attractive representation of the burlesque order, and will serve to revive interest in that frothy and glittering entertainment which is only substantial in the one respect of the joil jamps.

animal bled and ready for dressing, good time is made if they finish him in twenty minutes. There are some PRETTY PAST KILLERS

In St. Louis, and it is hard to find in any city better slaughterers than Michael Quinlan, John Scholl, Louis Koehler and John Keating. The fastest butchers are found in Chicago because there is so much packing done there that speed is the principal requisite. New York has the tastiest, and a stroll through any of the big markets there will show it to be true. The last contest of that kind in St. Louis was about three years ago when Sullivan and Keating beat two fellows front Chicago for a stake. These matches are not looked on with any great favor by reputable butchers and are engaged in chiefly by professional killers who have no meat business of their own and make their money by hiring out to kill beeves for dealers or packing houses. Some men of that kind work in one day for half a dozen houses."

The Quinlans were not at the market to-day, but it is well understood that nothing will come of the gauntiet thrown down by Dunn, as Michael Quinlan will not enter any such match. The friends of Mike are very numerous about the market, and there are some who say that he can kill five to every three that Dunn can dispose of. Dunn had no reputation as a killer two years ago, and if he is swift now he must have acquired his rapidity in handling the knife and cleaver during his service for the packers, where speed is developed. The business of professional killing proves lucrative to an industrious man who can derive a good income from a day's work in which twenty animals on the average are handled. There was, as usual, as excellent audience at the Standard last evening, and the Daly's "Vacation," vastly improved, pointed up and re-embellished, was well received. In addition to the music and specialties there are some wonderful things done in the dancing line, and the athleties are peculiarly infinitable, there being none in the profession who rival the Daly's in their peculiar lines. The company has also been strengthened by the addition of new people, Mr. Wm. Daly, ir, making a fine success in his dancing. Lizzie Denors, Jennie Williams, Lizzie Daly, Josie Dexoy, in addition to Thos. Wm., Robt, and Dan'l Daly, R. S. Lyle and George Denons were all well appreciated in their work, which was merry, vivacious and wittout a particle of duliness or sincture of "chestnutism."

Yesterday there were 5,000 persons gathered at the park, and the Browns were in a state of trepidation over certain threats advanced by Terry, as to how he would pitch them out. In this he made a woeful miscalculation, and they took to his swift delivery like a kitten to a saucer of cream, and liked it so well in the seventh inning that they never let go until they had put together eight runs, of which eight were earned. Foutz made four hits, and the others followed with as me a display of batting as the Browns have done this season. Their fielding was also exceedingly fine. The closing score was 15 to 4.

A sensational dispatch from Chicago was published this morning in one of the local papers stating that Gen. MacAdaras had reached Chicago yesterday direct from Paris, and that his visit to this country was in connection with a new move determined upon by the society of Invincibles, whose headquarters are at the French capital.

Gen. MacAdara, with Madam MacAdara and of Invincibles, whose nesuquareers are successful. Gen. MacAdara, with Madam MacAdara and Madamoiselle Gillman, arrived in St. Louis last evening and stopped at the Lindell. The card of a Post-Disparch reporter received a prompt reply in the shape of an invitation to step up to the General's private parlor, where he was found by the reporter. Gen. MacAdaras was very much surprised to hear that he had come direct from Paris, and also to read the statement in the paper that he was here on an Invincible mission.

"If I was in Paris the past summer I am not aware of the fact," said he. "You remember when I was here last; well, since then I have been to Boston, to the White Mountains, Catskills, New York, Buffalo, Chicago, and back here again. It is hardly worth my while to deny the stories that are floating around about me." "Then you are still entirely unconnected with the

"I have never been connected with the Invincibles, with the Land League or any other such organization. I have had nothing to do with them. I remained in Chicago about three hours and did not see any reporters or any one else connected with the press. And you may say for me that I have had nothing to do with Irish agitation."

A MURDEROUS ASSAULT.

Gus Berning Attacks and Severely Stabs Harry G. Keevil.

Shortly after 12 o'clock last night Gus Berning rentleman whose inordinate appetite for blood has made him conspicuous on many occasions, was standing at the corner of a saloon at the southeast corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, when Harry G. Keevil and James Ryan entered. Keevil is the Fourth street hatter, and represents the Second ward in the Democratic city committee, and he and Constable Ryan were just returning from a drive in called on account of darkness. The feature of the game was the catching of Finnegan of the Scotts.

An interesting game of ball was played yesterday morning at the Amateur Park, between the Busen nine and the Hufnagel nine, the former coming out victorious by a score 7 to 8. The features of the game were the battery work and two home runs made by George Stahl of the Busch nine.

Numerous communications and complaints have been received regarding scores in the Republican. Yesterday Foutz made four fine hits—to-day he is credited with three, his average thereby suffering in the tables which the Republican publishes euch week. Averages on such an emasculated basis are not worth the space devoted to them.
